FRANK J. HOLZMANN.

—Staffed Studio

Frank J. Holzmann of 5360 E. 1st St., Pittsburgh, Pa., says: "Four years ago I was suffering from indigestion and ulcerated stomach. I had been troubled this way for some time or twelve years and during that time had tried every means of relief recommended to me or prescribed by my physician, but I grew worse and life was almost unbearable with the constant pain, night and day. My food soured in my stomach, doing me no good, but rather causing me additional pain. I was urged to have an operation, but refused. I heard of Dr. Pierce's Golden Medical Discovery and began to take it. Before I had finished the first bottle the pain in my stomach had gone—it was a wonderful relief—but I was still skeptical about it and expected my old trouble of long standing to return. It is four years since and I have been absolutely free from all stomach trouble and never felt sicker or enjoyed my food as I do now."

BETTER THAN CALOMEL

Thousands Have Discovered Dr. Edwards' Olive Tablets are a Harmless Substitute

Dr. Edwards' Olive Tablets—the substitute for calomel—are a mild but sure laxative, and their effect on the liver is almost instantaneous. These little-olive-colored tablets are the result of Dr. Edwards' determination not to treat liver and bowel complaints with calomel.

The pleasant little tablets do the good that calomel does, but have no bad after effects. They don't burn the teeth like strong purgatives or calomel. They take hold of the trouble and quickly correct it. Why cure the liver at the expense of the teeth? Calomel sometimes plays havoc with the gums. So do strong purgatives. It is best not to take calomel. Let Dr. Edwards' Olive Tablets take its place.

Headaches, "dullness" and that lazy feeling come from constipation and a disordered liver. Take Dr. Edwards' Olive Tablets when you feel "lousy" and "heavy." They "clear" clouded brain and "perk up" the spirits. 15c and 50c.

Coughing—a futile waste of strength—

MEDICAL authorities agree that coughing aggravates the irritation in throat and lungs that is causing the cough and the more you cough the more you irritate the throat and the irritation is soon relieved. Dr. King's New Discovery stops coughing quickly by gently stimulating the mucous membrane to throw off clapping secretions. Harmlessly and effectively the violent throat and chest spasms are quieted, and the inflamed air then quickly clears away. It has an agreeable taste. All druggists.

White to Prevail Next Two Seasons

Fashion Writer at Winter Resorts Tells of Modes in Limelight.

Writing of the styles that promise to prevail this spring and summer, a fashion correspondent in the New York Times, who has made the rounds of winter resorts, says:

Although this is a season of beautiful colors, white is of course worn extensively in every possible form and fabric for every sort of occasion. Nothing is ever more youthful and lovely and flattering, and nothing else so well deserves its slighting in quality or workmanship. The very simplest frock of all white, so it be correct in style, with proper shoes, hat and other accessories, is always refreshing. This season's frocks in white are a delight and their variety is amazing.

As sports suit with the trim little skirt plaited or flared, tailored, the conventional blouse and coat is the first and most stable item in the wardrobe. This is severely plain this season, of flannel, felt, rosinamide or fine twill, and the silhouette is absolutely correct. The overalls, which is a part of the suit, is a simple thing of silk or crepe, held into a wide hip belt, and its sleeves are long, short, or none at all.

The outfit below of the flapper and copied by many a center is the sports skirt, and sweater of extraordinary design. These, with the beach shoes and a cloche or tan top, put the young woman in the most becoming and comfortable harness for the day's contests and diversions.

Quite as popular are the one-piece frocks, opening in the front, with wide collar turning away from the neck, long or short sleeves, belt and pockets. Pockets, in fact, appear to be de rigueur on all the morning dresses, white or colored, and they add a note of tailored smartness—even to the silk frocks. Small buttons and stitched bands also are used on some of these informal dresses.

Next to white, the gentle shades, something warmer than the pastels, in blue, green, maize, apricot, salmon and peach, are lovely in the morning frocks. In some of the latest models white is introduced in one of these colors—a simple gown of white poplin, for example, trimmed with bands of needlework or stitched embroidery in color.

Contrasts are startling. In occasional models these contrasts are startling. In one the blue blouse is of maize-colored crepe; the flounce, knee length, of white crepe, in the plait—and the square neck and wrist bands of the long sleeves are trimmed with embroidery in maize silk.

A striking model in the one-piece gown is made of a fine, heavy quality white flat crepe. An antique pattern of black cloth cut in wide stripes is applied over the entire frock. With this is offered a pair of white silk, on which a group of white-knobbed blackbirds is stamped; the bands and "frame" being of light blue; a cloche of white tulle and crepe, and a pair of white kid with narrow blacked stripes of velvet border.

A decided novelty, in the white frock is one of satin embroidery cut in stripes. The upper part of the frock is a tunic of velvet all-over one-sleeves are short to the elbow, and about them and the edge of the tunic is a stitched band of white silk of which the foundation slip is made and finished with a deep flounce of narrow plait.

Other unusual combinations of material are shown in these softer daytime frocks—silk and flannel, cloth and crepe, and embroideries on any sort of fabric.

A fashionable model is a little slip-over sleeveless dress of coarse open-weave white canvas of square mesh. The side of the bodice is open to the waistline, meeting under the arm, and the neck is cut in a deep V. Under this is worn a shirt of white silk, crepe de chine or fine batiste, and with the dress is worn a narrow belt of white batiste.

This sleeveless, smart and thoroughly easy little frock is quite the rage and is being made in light twills, ribbed silk and poplins in pretty colors, with the under blouse of sheerest white, and with shades and shoes matching the dress in color.

Usually the hat is a small cloche slung in white with a bit of the color introduced with needlework.

Knitted or Woven Dresses.

The knitted or woven dress is translated into a weight suited to June-like days. The stunning model, uncommonly smart, is of black silk jersey.

Maize-Colored Crepe and Self-Toned Embroidered Outfit.

like weave. The skirt, attached to an underbodice, is straight, with deep hem, and gathered slightly full at the waist. The overbodice is embroidered in a subtle, all-over pattern, in white silk, which also finishes the short elbow-length sleeves with a deep cuff border.

An overbodice and a slip of pale yellow satin crepe is embroidered in white floss. A white flat crepe is heavily embroidered in jade green. A maize-colored one-piece crepe gown has the straight long-sleeved bodice and sleeves embroidered in self-toned silk, and the skirt is plain to the knee, finishing in a plaited flounce.

A frock of hyacinth blue is embroidered in the same shade and one deeper, and both yellow and green in the lighter shades are popular. The combinations of black and white are popular and some are exceedingly smart.

Some very chic things are seen among the odds and ends, so to speak, of cutting toga. One is the white cloth waistcoat, cut on the lines of the hostess's waistcoat worn in the heavier sports suits. It is sleeveless and severely tailored, and is worn with a white sports skirt and tailored shirt, most suitably for golf and tennis.

The greatest variety is shown in sports skirts. The plain tailored or slightly gathered and the plaited skirt are equally good. White is the rage, of course, but many sunny styles are shown in plaids, checks and stripes, especially stripes that are conspicuously wide and are more modish in black and white than in colors. Roman striped materials are seen on many of the overalls as a trimming, sometimes as a knotted tie, under a sailor collar.

Sweaters are a conspicuous feature of the sports costume, decorative and comfortable as they are for so many occasions. They are all of lightweight wool or silk, knitted loosely, or in jersey ribbed weave, and the most popular designs are of white on which a pattern is traced in colors. The wildest flights of fancy are illustrated in many styles now in vogue.

Hats Are Unique.

Hats for the present season are changing, and some are unique. An amusing little model is hand-embroidered of fine white wool, as a table mat would be done, but in the shape of a cloche, the scalloped edge shading the crown. A green ribbon is tied around the crown and is knotted at one side. Many hats are shown in fine white straw, in raffia, ribbon or other material.

Some lovely shapes are shown by a prominent milliner in wide ribbon sewed together to form the dome-shaped crown and covered entirely with tiny ribbon bows fastened flat.

A pretty and suitable type of hat is fashioned of silk and straw combined in alternating strips. Light, summery and new, "Tans" and the soft feather-weight felt are for beach wear and boating briefly, and the fancy, more elaborate hats, in both the close and wide-brim models, are those worn for dressy afternoon wear.

Gloves are a negligible quantity, being worn little but some new styles are seen in white or yellow chambray, seersucker and kid, some with delicate embroidery, and most of them in the straight or gauntlet type.

Wraps required at resorts are in light of medium weight, simple, smart and picturesque. The long type of utility but shown among the most exclusive Paris models is particularly popular. It is made of silk, tulle, satin, or light-weight cloth. It is easily thrown over any gown, and is always smart. The sports coat in the women-woman world is in white and light colors, is indispensable, and few are shown this season without a collar of shaggy fur.

THREE-YEAR SCALE WILL ELIMINATE HIGH-COST MINES

Will Be Unable to Withstand
Competition With Big,
Strong Companies.

EFFECT NON-UNION WAGES

"What has been done in the Jacksonville strike," writes the Washington correspondent of the Coal Trade Journal, "has been to force the coal industry to face the fact that there will be no strike for three years if it is not met. But in itself it will produce a stability in the coal industry which it has not had since the war days. It would allow public apprehension and would tend to create a settled state of mind in both ends of the coal industry—capital and labor. But the truth is that the Jacksonville agreement will do little to cure much of the real disease of the industry."

"That, unquestionably, was over-capitalization and over-mining, resulting in overproduction. When stretched to the limit, the soft-coal double the normal consuming capacity of this country. The export market was a thing of chance, depending largely upon adverse conditions in European coal fields; so the industry in this country, taken in the long run, was principally regulated by home conditions."

"Now, the operators and miners have said there will be no strike for three years. That means simply that many of the high-cost mines will be unable to live if conditions remain normal in other respects. It is believed here. There are some of them that simply can not exist if they must go three years without a strike; perhaps more of them than even the best-informed about coal conditions realize. There are mines that can not stand competition with strong companies operating good veins. At the end of three years some of these mines, possibly a large number of them, will be definitely out of the situation so far as following the next negotiations is concerned, according to the government view."

"There probably has been considerable under the surface by the big operators a stirring drama of financial and industrial life, with little shows fighting for existence against the fellows who tell that their own interest, in profits and in protection of the industry against public intervention, demands a policy that is a careful, studied, in its effects on the coal flows."

"The task of the mine's leaders may have been less difficult for they have a better organization, but it required no less courage. John L. Lewis, head of the miners, understood when he was working months ago for a long-term agreement, even better than three years—that if there was such an agreement it would be the death warrant for many mines; and that if the death warrants of mines were signed it would mean loss of even part-time employment for thousands of miners. They would lose their jobs with the mines where they had worked for years, and if they tried to pull up and go to other mines they probably would find no work."

"It is fair to be a drastic process of curtailment of capital and labor for many. It looks like a cure in which many must suffer and be eliminated from the industry."

Modern Diversions Cause People to Lose Ideals as Christians, Bishop Declares

By United Press.
PHILADELPHIA, March 10.—"Amused" music, radio and motion pictures have caused city dwellers to lose the high ideals of a Christian people, according to Bishop Thomas J. Garland of the Protestant Episcopal Church. Garland made this statement in his first public address since he succeeded Bishop Rhinelander.

"There has been a tremendous change in church and city life in the last 10 years," Bishop Garland said. "This has been due partly to the increase of foreigners in the country, whom the country has not tried to make Americans and the church has not tried to make Christians."

"We have advanced scientifically but we have lost the high ideals of our ancestors. Home training is almost a thing of the past and our future hangs in the balance if it is not restored. There are many foreigners in the country and with the increasing problems of immigration the church is too much concerned with administering to those already in the fold and neglecting these immigrants. If we do not reach them our highest ideals will soon be reduced to their standard of living."

"Forty years ago we did not have the outside influences that we have today. Now we have the best operas during the Lenten season and at Easter the public flocks to Atlantic City for the styles. The movies which are declared in many circles to have a bad influence on children, cannot music, radio and other modern things all take the minds of the people away from Lent and their religious duties."

Bishop Garland urged that missionary work among foreigners in the United States be given every consideration.

"THE MAN SHE BROUGHT BACK"

On view today and tomorrow at the Paramount, presents Earle Fox and Doris Miller in interesting roles. We have had many stories of the bravery of the Northwest Mounted Police, but never have we had the angle presented so dramatically in "The Man She Brought Back." Perhaps that is because Jasper King Brady wrote the story, which is about a young Mounted Police recruit who is overwhelmed by fear the first time he is sent out to get a man. He falls and is dishonored before the girl he loves. Then it is her faith in his potential courage that brings out his manhood. Of course he makes good, and thereby hangs a dramatic climax to a thoroughly entertaining tale. The acting of Earle Fox, Doris Miller and Frank Losee leaves nothing to be desired. Miss Miller is the charming young daughter of Charles Miller, producer and director of the film.

Wednesday and Thursday, Nell Shipman will be seen in "The Grub Stake," a thrilling story of a girl's conquest of gold regions.

The Soisson

"A SAILOR MADE MAN"—A Harold Lloyd comedy, and "The Near Lady," with Gladys Walton, in the stellar role, provides splendid entertainment today at the Soisson.

"Oh, for the life of a sailor!" is the way Harold Lloyd makes you feel after you've laughed yourself weak and foolish over his amazing comedy of the bounding deep, "A Sailor-Made Man."

A snug sum has been spent to give this comedy the atmospheric tone of a feature. High exterior and interior sets of the Maharajah's palace were erected. An Oriental street and its bazaars contain a wealth of detail. The battleship scenes were taken aboard the U. S. S. Frederick, and the navy atmosphere is perfect.

In "The Near Lady" Miss Walton is very attractive as the mail carrier who deserts the barber shop for the golf course when her dad's sausage machine makes a million dollars. The cast is well balanced, Kate Price and Otis Harlan being especially good in the roles of the parents of the mail carrier. Their action is virtually all light comedy. Jerry Gendron does good work as the leading man.

Thursday, Friday and Saturday, Wesley Barry will be seen in "The Country Kid."

The Orpheum

"THE HUMMING BIRD"—One of Gloria Swanson's greatest Paramount pictures, opened today at the Orpheum for a three-day attraction.

The story is an adaptation of the stage play by Maude Fulton. The star has the role of Toinette, a girl of the Paris underworld, leader of the Apaches, whose undaunted courage makes her a heroic figure during the dark days of the World War, when Paris was threatened with invasion. She falls in love with Randall Carey, representative of an American newspaper, this furnishing the motivation for the story.

Toinette in her dual role of the "Humming Bird" is a hunted creature. Every crime committed in the Montmartre section is credited to "him," for, to all but her intimates, the "Humming Bird" is an extremely clever boy. She is too much for the authorities, though. The girl does great work in enlisting her associates into the service of France, for which she receives the pardon of France for her crimes and is decorated with the Croix de Guerre, won by an associate, unfortunately on the field of battle.

It's a great tale, this. And we've never seen Gloria Swanson to finer advantage. She took the house by storm.

Thursday, Friday and Saturday, Richard Dix, Lois Wilson and Marguerite Day will be seen in "The Call of the Canyon," one of Zane Grey's greatest western novels.

Not Old Age, Surely

A minister met a parishioner and asked him the usual question:

"Well, John, how are you today?"

"Gay well, sir; gay well," replied John, cautiously, "if it wasn't for the rheumatism in my right leg."

"Ah, well, John, be thankful; for there is no mistake you are getting old like the rest of us, and old age does not come alone."

"Auld age, sir," said John. "I wonder to hear ye. Auld age has naething to do with it. Here's my right leg just as auld, and it's quite sound and sope yet."

THIS MAN GREATLY HELPED

Aliments That Cause Suffering Disappear on Taking Dreneo.

Mr. John Lynch, 121 Carnegie avenue, Connellsville, Pa., says: "Somebody said 'If you don't succeed try and try again.' Well I have tried and tried again to find a medicine that would relieve me of my trouble but without success."

"I couldn't eat without being thrown into a nervous fit of pain. Indigestion would grip my stomach. I would gasp for breath. I was a nervous wreck. My kidneys bothered me so that I couldn't sleep. Gastritis bloated my stomach, made it sore and made me belch."

"I always felt tired. I hated to do the lightest kind of work. I ended weak and when I walked I just dragged my feet after the other. I had pains all over. Sometimes my head would ache so bad that I couldn't see. And nothing helped me, brought me any relief. That is nothing until I met up with Dreneo."

"This medicine fixed me all right. I quickly put me in good shape. My stomach and kidneys in working order. All pain I have forgotten. They have disappeared. I owe everything to this great medicine, Dreneo. I hope that you and yours suffering as I did will make use of its marvelous health giving powers."

Dreneo is made by the famous David H. Fulton & Bro. Laboratories, Baltimore, Md., and is being speedily introduced in this section by Connellsville Drug Company and sold by druggists everywhere. —Advertisement.

General Butler And Magistrate Near Fist Fight

By United Press.

PHILADELPHIA, March 8.—The attack of the Republican organization leaders here on Smedley Butler, director of public safety, because of methods he is using in his attempts to clean up the city came to a climax when a fist fight between the general and Ed P. Carney, city magistrate, was narrowly averted in the general's office in city hall.

The affair grew out of an alleged statement on the part of Butler that some friends of Carney's were a "lot of bums."

Carney went to the general and demanded to know if the statement were true. He failed to get a confirmation or a denial. In the argument which followed the two men nearly came to blows. Butler, sensing the effect of the move in his own office, got himself in hand and called a truce.

Philadelphians, churches, clubs and women's organizations stand ready to stage a dramatic demonstration to prove to Butler he is wanted here. More than 600 clergymen have announced they will march on city hall Monday and other leaders united with Butler who has requested that no demonstration be staged next week.

Mayor Kenelick has reiterated his statement that he is solidly behind Butler and will give no heed to demands of the organization leaders.

COKERS WIN OVER TARENTUM

HIGH SCHOOL FIGHTING AGAINST GREAT ODDS IS WINNER IN FINAL MINUTES

Carnegie Tech Gym Scene of Wild Joy as Locals Forge to Front, 24-20.

EVERYBODY IS A HERO

The indomitable fighting spirit of Connellville High School's basketball team, the biggest factor in winning the Western Pennsylvania Interscholastic Athletic League championship over Tarentum High School, 24-20, was on display at the Carnegie Tech gymnasium in Pittsburgh when the Cokers won out in the first round of the elimination series for the title, defeating Tarentum High School, 24-20.

It was an up-hill battle all the way for the Cokers, but they hung on tenaciously and in the final three minutes were rewarded. The great cheering body backing the Connellville team never became quiet, in spite of the fact their favorites were trailing, and the great outburst of sound when the Cokers finally tied the count at 16-16, with Jean George dropping in a foul shot, threatened to "lift the roof."

More words will not describe the battle as it was fought. Ten boys, each willing to give his all to attain the victory, struggled with a force-decomposition. The strain was far greater on the Cokers because they were led, had not even tied the score until the middle of the final frame. Playing under such odds, on a strange floor, battling against a foe that outwitted it in every department, the Connellville team pitched into the battle "tooth and nail."

Ray Welsh, calm and cool-headed throughout, proved his right to be dubbed the "finest captain" in the league. Playing his guard position with more effectiveness than he has ever shown, he kept the score of the opponents down and directed his team with the strategy of a great commander-in-chief. In the final quarter, when the Cokers finally scored the count at 20-20, he at once secured a short time-out and though what no player or coach in that brief span is not known, it had its effect. His boys went back to work and at once scored the goals that won the game.

Frenzied fans rushed on to the floor as the gun which ended the game was fired. The Orange and Black basketballs were almost snatched by the scores who endeavored to get close enough for a hand-clasp and word of congratulation of just to even pat a shoulder. Welsh was mounted on the shoulders of his rosters but refused to ride above the others and fought his way back to the floor.

As Tarentum's fans fled silently out of the big hall, groups of Connellvillians gave vent to cheers that are heard only when they are loosed by surprise. It was necessary to darken the hall to keep some of them from leaving.

News of the victory reached Connellville quickly by radio. It spread like wild fire throughout the downtown district and was the subject of conversation on every corner. In every store, or anywhere that persons with any pride of home town achievement congregated.

It seemed that everyone at the game with the exception of people from Tarentum, rooted for Connellville. The feeling in W. P. I. A. League circles is that the finals will see Connellville and Homestead battling for the championship.

Tarentum moved rapidly into the lead when the game got under way. Two baskets made in quick succession threw the locals on the defense and then Jean George and Ray Welsh, both guards, scored. George got the free and last baskets of the game.

The first quarter ended 9-5 for Tarentum and the half saw the score at 11-5. Tarentum had an advantage in size that aided its passing attack but the local defense system broke up Mayesdale Cadets Win. MEYERSDALE, March 10.—Last Friday evening the Catholic Cadets won their third successive game of basketball by defeating the Salisbury Independents by the score of 46-19.

Kirkwood Finished Fifth. The Kirkwood, Australian open golf champion and holder of the California open championship last year, finished fifth this year turning in a card of 230 for 72 holes.

Stubby Mack Set Loose With String Attached. Frank ("Stubby") Mack was not among those present when the White Sox hurlers reported at Winter Haven, Fla. The young hurler will spend next season under Ira Thomas at Shreveport, La. A string has been attached to the player and he'll be recalled next fall.

Mack was purchased in midseason of 1922 from the Seattle club, the price being $10,000. Due to various ailments he showed only flashes of form, so last spring he was turned out, first to Nashville, Tenn., and then to Galveston, Tex.

Del Gainer, first baseman and outfielder, after being released by Connellville Landis and given his release by the St. Louis Nationals, promptly signed with the Houston club.

Bill Roper has made a fine record as head coach at Princeton since the war. Of the ten games played with Harvard and Yale during that period, Princeton has won five, tied two, and lost three.

The New York Yankees have begun to shed some of the minor league "talent" taken on for accommodation. For instance, pitcher Benny Kant was returned to the Atlanta club of the Southern league.

Al Tison, outfielder, who has been playing with the outworn Simmons team of Kenosha, Wis., for two or three years, is going to return to organized baseball as a member of the Louisville Colonels.

The eastern qualifying round for the national open golf championship will be played on May 28 and 29, according to an announcement made by the Professional Golfers' Association of America recently. The tournament will be played on the course of the Worcester (Mass.) Country Club, which was selected some time ago. The western qualifying round will be held in Chicago, but neither the course nor the dates have yet been fixed. According to the new arrangement adopted for trial this year the seventy-nine low scores and those tied for eighteenth place in the qualifying rounds will be eligible to compete in the national open, which will be held at Oakland Hills, Detroit, on June 6 and 7.

Italian Heavyweight Is Going to Return

Spalla Is Coming Backed by Stentorian Ballyhoo.

Now that it seems certain that Spaullo, the Italian heavyweight, is going to return to this country with the backing of a stentorian ballyhoo, a word or two concerning this alleged champion of Europe will be in order. Spalla, then, is a raw-looking Italian who came to this country two or three years ago and hung around Newark, working out in gymnasiums and occasionally fighting. He was very quick to pick up things and such boxes as Charley Welton and Young Bob Fitzsimmons were willing to show him tricks of the trade.

The consequence was that he developed more than a fair knowledge of boxing, and in the gym he looked to be as clever as any of them. In fact, as a gymnasium brawler he came to be quite impressive. It was when he went into the ring against three rats that he did not appear too good.

As for Spalla, he showed signs of being able to develop into a good fighter, and if he had been in this country in the last fifteen months instead of Europe he might have sized up by now as a good second rate. That is, he would have, had he controlled his respect whenever he saw a sign of food.

Like Virgo, Spalla is an artist with the knife and fork—that is to say, he is an artist so far as making these implements move rapidly is concerned. These foreigners don't seem to realize that in this climate one cannot eat and drink as one does in other climates.

Nick Kilns, who probably will manage Spaullo, may be able to make him cut down on his fish and soup and spaghetti stuff, and if so, he may be carried along until he gets into the ring against some real performer. He is a likable young man and always willing to take advice, so perhaps his manager will not have the tough stuff that Sick's manager, for instance, has.

Zen of the Y.D.

A NOVEL OF THE FOOTHILLS

by Robert Stead

AUTHOR OF "THE COW PUNCHER," "THE HOMESTEADERS," "NEIGHBORS," ETC.

COPYRIGHT BY ROBERT STEAD

They were standing at the door of the tent, he holding back the flap that she might enter. The valley was already in shadow, and there was no sunlight to play on her hair, but her face and figure in the mellow dusk seemed entirely winsome and adorable. There was no hint of Y.D.'s millions in the admiration that Transley bent upon her. Of course, as an admirer, the millions were not to be despised.

When the men had finished supper Transley summoned her. On the way to the chuck-wagon she passed close to George Drakz. It was evident that he had chosen a station with that result in view. She had passed by when she turned, whimsically.

"Well, George, how's that Peter-brother?" she said.

"Up and coming all the time, Zen," he answered.

She bit her lip over his familiarity, but she had no comeback. She had given him the opening, by calling him "George."

"You see, I got quite well acquainted with Mr. Drakz when he came back to hunt for a horse blanket which had mysteriously disappeared," she explained to Transley.

They ascended the steps which led from the ground into the wagon. The light had been reset for four, and as the shadows were now heavy in the valley, candles had been lighted. Y.D. and his daughter sat on one side, Transley on the other. In a moment Linder entered. He had already had a talk with Y.D., but had not met Zen since their supper together in the rancher's house.

"Glad to see you again, Mr. Linder," said the girl, rising and extending her hand across the table. "You see we lost no time in returning your call."

Linder took her hand in a frank grasp, but could think of nothing in particular to say. "We're glad to have you," was all he could manage.

Zen was rather sorry that Linder had not made more of the situation. She wondered what quick repartee, what, no doubt, with double meaning, Transley would have returned. It was evident that, as her father had said, Linder was second best. And yet there was something about his shyness that appealed to her even more than did Transley's superb self-confidence.

The meal was spent in small talk about horses and steeves and the merits of the different makes of moving machines. When it was finished Transley apologized for not offering his guests any liquor. "I never keep it about the camp," he said.

"Quite right," Y.D. agreed, "quite right. Booze is like fire; a valuable thing in careful hands, but mighty dangerous when everybody gets playing with it. I reckon the grass is getting pretty dry, Transley."

"Doubtful dry, all right, but we're taking every precaution."

"I'm sure you are, but you can't take precautions for other people. Has anybody been putting you up to any trouble here?"

"Well, no, I can't exactly say trouble," said Transley, "but we've got notice it's coming. A chap named Grant, foreman, I think, for London, down the valley, rode over last night, and invited us not to cut any hay hereabouts. He was very courteous and all that, but he had the manner of a man who'd go quite a distance in a pitch."

"What did you tell him?"

"Told him I was working for Y.D., and then asked him to stay for supper."

"Did he stay?" Zen asked.

"He did not. He centered off back, courteous as he came. And this morning we went out on the job, and have cut all day, and nothing has happened."

"I guess he found you were not to be bluffed," said Zen, and Transley could not prevent a flush of pleasure at her compliment. "Of course London has no real claim to the hay, has he, Dad?"

"Of course not. I reckon there'll be his stacks we saw down the valley. Well, I'm not wanting to rob him of the fruit of his labor, and if he keeps calm because we'll let him have what he has cut, but if he don't—" Y.D.'s face hardened with the set of a man accustomed to fight, and with his own battles. "I think we'll just stick around a day or two in case he tries to start anything," he continued.

"Well, five o'clock comes early," said Transley, "and you folks must be tired with your long drive. We've had your tent pitched down by the river, Zen, so that its murmur may lull you to sleep. You see, I have some of the people in me, too. Mr. Linder will show you down, and I will see that your father is made comfortable. And remember—five o'clock does not apply to visitors."

The camp now lay in complete darkness, save where a lantern threw its light from a tent by the river. Zen walked by Linder's side. Presently she reached out and took his arm.

"I beg your pardon," said Linder, "I should have offered—"

"Of course you should. Mr. Transley would not have waited to be told. Dad thinks that daylight's worth having in this world is worth going after and going after hard. I guess I'm Dad's daughter in more ways than one."

"I suppose that's right," Linder confessed. "But I've always been shy. I go home all right with men."

"The truth is, Mr. Linder, you're not shy—you're frightened. Now I can well believe that no man could frighten you. Consequently you get along all right with men. Do I need to tell you the rest?"

"I never thought of myself as being afraid of women," he replied. "It has always seemed that they were, well, he replied, just out of my line."

They had reached the tent but the girl made no sign of going in. In the silence the sibilant hiss of the stream rose loud about them.

"Mr. Linder," she said at length, "do you know why Mr. Transley sent you down here with me?"

"I'm sure I don't except to show you to your tent."

"That was the least of his purposes. He wanted to show you that he wasn't afraid of you, and he wanted to show me that he wasn't afraid of you. Mr. Transley is a very self-confident individual. There is such a thing as being too self-confident. Mr. Linder, just at there is such a thing as being too shy. Do you get me? Good night!" And with a little rush she was in her tent.

Linder walked slowly down to the water's edge, and stood there, thinking, until Zen's light went out. His brain was in a whirl with a sensation entirely strange to it. A wind, laden with snow-melt from the mountains, pressed gently against his features, and presently Linder took deeper breaths than he had ever known before.

"By Jove!" he said. "Who'd have thought it possible!"

CHAPTER IV

When Zen awoke next morning the morning machines of Transley's outfit were already singing their symphony in the meadows; she could hear the muffled rhythm as it came borne on the early breeze. She lay awake on her camp cot for a few minutes, stretching her fingers to the canvas ceiling and feeling that it was good to be alive. And it was. The ripple of water came from almost underneath the walls of her tent; the smell of spruce trees and balsam-wood and new-mown hay was in the air. She could feel the warmth of the sunshine already pouring upon her white roof; she could trace the gentle sway of the trees by the leafy patterns gliding forward and back. A cheery gopher, exploring about the door of her tent, ventured in, and, sitting bolt upright, sent his shrill whistle boldly forth. She watched his fine bravery for a minute, then clasped her hands together, and laughed as he fled.

"Therein we have the figures of both Transley and Linder," she mused to herself. "Upright, Transley; horizontal, Linder. I doubt if the poor fellow slept last night after the fright I gave him."

Slowly and calmly she turned the incident over in her mind. She wondered a little if she had been quite fair with Linder. Her words and conduct were capable of very broad interpretation. She was not at all in love with Linder; of that Zen was sure. She was equally sure that she was not at all in love with Transley. She admitted that she admired Transley for his calm assumptions, but they nettled her a little nevertheless. If this should develop into a love affair—if it should—she had no intention that it was to be a pleasant afternoon's center. It was to be a race—a race, mind you—and may the best man win! She had a feeling, amounting almost to a conviction, that Transley underrated his foreman's possibilities in such a contest. She had seen many a dark horse, less promising than Linder, gallop home with the stakes.

Then Zen smiled her own quiet, self-confident smile. The idea of either Transley or Linder thinking he could gallop home with her! For the moment she forgot to do Linder the justice of remembering that nothing was further from his thoughts. She would show them. She would make a race of it—almost to the wire. In the home stretch she would make the leap, out and over the fence. She was in it for the race, not for the finish.

Zen contemplated for some minutes the possibilities of that race; then, as the imagination threatened to become involved, she sprang from her cot and thrust a cautious head through the door of her tent. The gang had long since gone to the fields, and friendly bushes sheltered her from view from the cook car. She drew on her boots, shook out her hair, threw a towel across her shoulders, and, soap in hand, walked boldly the few steps to the stream, tripping over its slaty gravel bed. She stopped and tested the water with her fingers; then brought it in fresh, cool handfuls about her face and neck.

"Morning, Zen!" said a familiar voice. "Scuse me for happenin' to be here. I was just waterin' that Peter-brother after a hard ride."

"Now look here, Mr. Drakz!" said the girl, whipping her scanty clothing about her. "If I had a gun—I won't have you spying about!"

"Aw, don't be cross," Drakz protested. He was sitting on his horse in the ford a dozen yards away. "I just happened along. I guess the outside belongs to all of us. Say, Zen, if I was to get properly introduced, what's the chance?"

"Not one in a million, and if that isn't odds enough I'll double it."

"You're not going to hitch up with Linder, are you?"

"Linder? Who said anything about Linder?"

"Gee, but ain't she innocent!" Drakz stepped his horse up a few feet to facilitate conversation. "I ain't take an interest in innocent gals away from home, so I kinda keep my angel eye on you las' night. An' I see Linder stalkin' around here an' might out over the water when he should 'ave been in bed. But, of course, he's been introduced."

"George Drakz, if you speak to me again I'll horsewhip you out of the camp at noon before all the men. Now, beat it!"

"Jus, as you say, ma'am," he returned, with mock courtesy. "But you don't need to be scared. That's one thing I never do—I never squeal on a friend."

America Leads in Home Comforts

THE average American home has more comforts and conveniences than the places of Europe. Home for home, the American household has a well-kept look, an atmosphere of prosperity and contentment you cannot find in the homes of any other country in the world.

In foreign lands, the modernized dwelling, as we know it, is found only in limited numbers and then only in the larger cities.

In America, even in remote rural districts, you find pianos, vacuum cleaners, washing machines, up-to-date heating systems, telephones and numberless appliances that go far to make life easier, happier and more worth while.

You may not realize it, but America's high standard of home life is due largely to advertising. For the development of advertising is distinctively American. It has taken its place as a leading force in bringing together the interests and wants of a great, united people. And a large share of the credit for this development is due the newspapers.

Stop and think how many of the appliances you use, the foods you eat, the clothes you wear, and other articles entering into your every-day life, were popularized by newspaper advertising.

Then you will realize what a vital part advertising has played and is playing in your daily life.

200,000 NON-FATAL INJURIES TO MINER WORKERS EACH YEAR

Result in a Coal Tonnage Loss Valued at About $30,000,000.

NOT ALL COMPENSABLE

Non-fatal injuries occurring at coal mines in the United States number approximately 200,000 per year and represent a total coal tonnage loss valued at about $30,000,000, according to a statistical study made by the Department of the Interior through the Bureau of Mines. The average mine accident entailing only temporary disability means a loss of production of approximately 60 tons of coal, it is estimated. It is calculated that each accident of this nature results in a time loss to the worker of 15 days. With the daily output of coal per man figured at four tons, and with coal valued at $3.25 per ton, at the mine, the average value of lost tonnage for each accident entailing temporary disability is $195. The time and monetary loss per accident would, of course, be increased if accidents entailing permanent disability or death were included in the tabulation.

The above conclusions were drawn from reports furnished the Bureau of Mines during 1923 by the operators of 200 coal mines, who have cooperated with the bureau in a special study of mine accidents by furnishing a separate report of each accident disabling an employee for more than the remainder of the shift. In all, a study of more than 3,000 coal mine accidents result fatally. Deaths, permanent total disabilities, and permanent partial disabilities constitute less than five per cent of all mine accidents, while disabilities of a temporary nature account for 95 per cent of mine accidents.

In bituminous mines, falls of rock and slides, the Bureau of Mines figures, are responsible for 29 per cent of all temporary injuries and 35 per cent of all time lost by underground workers. Injuries from this cause average 21 days loss of time per man injured.

Mine haulage was found to be responsible for 28 per cent of all temporary injuries and 30 per cent of all time lost. Injuries from this cause average 19 days loss of time per man injured.

Mine explosions and fires were found to be responsible for three-tenths of one per cent of all temporary injuries and slightly less than that percentage of all time lost. Injuries from this cause average 12 days loss of time per man injured.

The Pennsylvania State Compensation law does not provide for compensation when disability terminates before the 10th day after the accident, the bureau points out. This means that approximately 14 out of every 100 mine accidents in Pennsylvania are not covered by the compensation law. In states having a 7-day waiting period, and therefore not compensating a miner if he is disabled six days or less, the Bureau of Mines figures show that about 30 out of every 100 accidents remain in the uncompensated class.

As Penalty For Using Temporary Lights

Fire Underwriter Chief Urges Flashlights As Safest Device

STOP using candles, oil lamps, matches and tapers for temporary illumination is the warning of W. E. Mallon, general manager of the National Board of Fire Underwriters, who points to these "open lights" as the cause of a $3,000,000 fire loss in the United States each year.

His figures are not guess work, they are established by the fire losses and causes reported to the Fire Underwriters' Actuary Bureau, which is the center of fire loss statistics for the country.

"Fire prevention engineers have an axiom which runs, cryptically, somewhat like this: 'If you look for a gas leak with a match or candle you will be sure to find it.'"

Mr. Mallon said, "It might also be said that using similar means of illumination in a closet or other dark space is like looking for trouble—certain to bring results, sooner or later."

Public Careless

"It would seem that the danger of such a practice would be obvious, yet the public continues to indulge in it and a surprising number of what we call 'open light' fires ensue, many of them being attended by painful burning, or even loss of life."

"As soon as a match is struck it creates three things—light, heat and danger. The possibility of trouble becomes immediate, because flame always seeks to spread. With a candle, in addition to the obvious hazard of the flame when carried upright, there is always the likelihood of the candle falling out of the holder and igniting inflammable material. Fire may also result when a draft sweeps the flame.

"Because of the hazard of 'open lights'—as indicated by the annual fire loss of $3,000,000 from that source—we urge people to use electric flashlights for temporary illumination in cellars, closets, on stairways and in other places customarily lacking in sufficient light. They are safe, and at the same time, more efficient than candles, matches, tapers or similar make shifts."
